Causes of the English Civil War
In 1642, Charles I tried to arrest some MPs but failed.	In 1626, Parliament refused to raise taxes for the king.	In 1625, Charles married a French Catholic princess, called Henrietta Maria.
In 1634, Charles made a new tax, called Ship Money, to help pay for his expensive lifestyle.	Charles believed in the Divine Right of Kings – this meant that God had chosen him as King.	In 1640, Charles fought a war against Scotland and lost. He had to pay the Scots to leave England.
Charles made changes in religion - when some people complained, he cut off their ears.	In 1625 England were badly beaten by Spain, in a battle that cost a lot of money.	In 1629, Charles dissolved Parliament (sent them home) and ruled without them for 11 years.
In 1640, the Irish rebelled against Charles, because they didn't like Charles' religious changes.	In 1641, Charles had to go to Parliament to ask for more money to fight the Irish and Scots.	Later in 1642, after the attempts to arrest the MPs, there were riots in London. Charles had to leave London for his own safety.

Key Battles

Battle of Edgehill

The Battle of Edgehill, on Sunday 23rd October 1642, saw the army of the Earl of Essex, the Parliamentarian Lord General, and the King's army clash in the first major action of the Civil War. It was fought in fields in Warwickshire. The Battle of Edgehill was intended to be the one great battle to decide the war. Although often viewed as an indecisive battle where no side won outright, in effect a bloody draw, the king actually gained an important advantage. Essex failed to break through and had to retreat northward, to the safety of the parliamentarian garrison (fort) at Warwick. This left the Royalists in command of the road to London, and control of the capital was the key to the war.

Battle of Marston

Moor

The Battle of Marston Moor, which took place in the evening of the 2nd July, is believed to have been the largest battle ever fought on English soil. The Royalists had 10,000 fewer troops than the Parliamentarians. After initial success on the left and in the centre, Prince Rupert was defeated in dramatic fashion. In just a couple of hours the Royalist northern army was effectively destroyed, and Rupert and the Royalist cavalry lost their reputation as an unbeatable force. Oliver Cromwell made his name as great commander showing how a well equipped, trained and committed Parliamentarian army could win the war.

Battle of Naseby

The Battle of Naseby was fought on the morning of the 14th June 1645. Parliament's New Model Army destroyed King Charles I's main field army. After nearly three years of conflict, this was the decisive battle of the Civil War. Only about 4000 Royalists escaped the field, most of whom were either cavalry or senior officers, some seriously wounded. The main Royalist field army had been destroyed. The next month, Parliament's New Model Army went on to defeat the last significant Royalist cavalier army, at Langport. Afterwards it was largely a matter of clearing the remaining Royalist Garrisons.
